Family Centered Care:
A Checklist for Families

SETHU
Child Development and Family Guidance

Family-centered care (FCC) is a partnership approach to health care decision-making. FCC is an attitude change in the way clinical care is delivered. FCC ensures that healthcare is planned around the whole family and all members are recognised as care receivers and active decision makers.

The general principles of FCC are:

- Respectful and Supportive Care: A working relationship marked by respect for diversity, cultural and linguistic traditions, and care preferences.
- Partnership and Collaboration: Medically appropriate decisions that best fit the needs, strengths, values, and abilities of the families at the level they choose.
- Information Sharing: General information about community resources, as well as information specific to the child's disability is shared in an open, objective, and unbiased manner.
- Coordinated and Comprehensive Care: Care and decision-making reflect the child within the context of his/her family, home, school, daily activities, and quality of life within the community.

Question	Yes/No
Do you tell your clinician your preferred meeting time (eg., online)?
Do you tell your clinician about the things your child and family enjoy and do well?
Do you connect with other families to share experiences and support one another?
Do you ask questions when you have not understood the information shared with you?
Do you share information honestly with clinicians to make sure they know what is important to you and your family?
Do you tell clinicians how involved you want to be in planning and implementing your child's care?
Do you tell your clinicians what you would like your child to do?
Do you speak up on behalf of your child when your child's needs or wishes are not met?
Do you invite other supportive people to attend meetings/sessions with you?
Do you provide feedback to your clinician about what is or is not going well?

(Adapted from CanChild - Centre for Childhood Disability Research)